

---

David Icke banned from 'Big Brother' public meeting with Bob Geldof and David Davis

Friday, 04 July 2008

Please circulate this story

The 'Big Brother' By-Election is a SHAM

David Icke banned from 'Big Brother' public meeting with Bob Geldof and David Davis

David Davis doesn't want a real debate on the Orwellian State &ndash; he wants a controlled one that's only on his terms with safe people like Tony Benn and Bob Geldof.

The basis on which this by-election was called &ndash; to have an open debate on the Big Brother State &ndash; is a blatant misrepresentation of what is actually happening.

Today, David Icke attended the Hull Guildhall with a resident from the Haltemprice and Howden constituency, with tickets booked through the local Conservative Party in her name, to see the presentation of David Davis and Bob Geldof on 'civil liberties'.

The resident was told, as was everyone else, that this was a public debate open to anyone so long as they had a ticket booked. The event was advertised as such on the David Davis website.

But as soon as the David Davis minders saw David Icke everything changed. Suddenly it was a 'private' event that only invited people could attend. This was an outrageous untruth.

David Icke, as someone who was warning about the coming Big Brother State before either of today's speakers had even heard of it, simply wanted to listen to what they had to say, but was not allowed even though he had a ticket.

Davis said he called this by-election to have a public debate on these issues, yet won't even allow the world's most prolific writer on the subject to sit in an audience and listen to him. So Big Brother steps in to stop David Icke attending a meeting called to 'challenge Big Brother'.

You couldn't make it up.

This Sunday, at the Willerby Manor Hotel, Willerby, near Hull, anyone can come to David Icke's public meeting. See the details on this page.

David Icke: Big Brother - The BIG Picture