

MPs Vote To Allow Human-Animal Hybrids

Thursday, 23 October 2008

MPs Vote To Allow Human-Animal Hybrids

'Following a landmark Commons vote, Britain will become one of a handful of countries in the world to encourage ground-breaking research by implanting human cells into an egg taken from an animal, usually a rabbit. Pro-life MPs warned that the step could lead to the creation of half-human, half-ape "humanzees" or "minotaurs" - a claim denied by the Department of Health.'

Read more...