

The End of ID Cards? Now Government Reveals They WON'T be Compulsory

Wednesday, 01 July 2009

The End of ID Cards? Now Government Reveals They WON'T be Compulsory

'British citizens will never be forced to carry ID cards, the Government announced today. Home Secretary Alan Johnson said that a trial scheme that was to force some airport staff to carry the controversial cards has been scrapped. The massive climbdown means that carrying an ID card will now never be made compulsory for members of the general public.'

Read more...