'Sexed up' Report on the Death of David Kelly: Lord Hutton Findings challenged by Medical Doctors

'On November 3, 2006, The Times published a letter by Lord Hutton regarding the circumstances of Dr. David Kelly's death. In this letter, Lord Hutton dwells largely on the issue of "sexed up" intelligence rather than on the circumstances and causes of Dr. David Kelly's death.

The inquiry was supposed to be an inquest. Suicide was always assumed but suicide was in fact never established. In this regard, it was not only the intelligence which had been "sexed up", the Hutton Report, which assumed suicide without proof, had "sexed up" its findings to implement a coverup and undermine due process.'
