

Dick and the Tossers

Thursday, 14 November 2002

DICK AND THE TOSSERS

AN OPINION ABOUT RICHARD WARMAN FROM A MAN WHO IS WORKING TO EXPOSE THE HORRORS PERPETRATED AGAINST CHILDREN EVERY DAY. PLEASE CIRCULATE.

DICK AND THE TOSSERS

Richard Warman, a Canadian lawyer who in my opinion and oft related opinions of others, came over as a sorry arsed publicity seeker in a Channel 4 documentary on David Icke, a couple of years ago, (Many of whom incidentally, only watched the show to see what David Icke was up to these days.) continues his belligerent crusade against David's right to express his opinions. This time Warman has issued a libel action against him. What the charges are specifically I don't know, but contrary to Warman's accusations, David Icke is NOT anti-Semitic.

During the programme Warman, in a well-practiced maniacal cackle drooled over his plot to censure people's opportunity to decide for themselves what they wish to hear. With flicking tongue, and quivering fingers spidering the air, he held court over his adoring, seemingly mesmerised collaborators. He delighted in announcing that of course if anyone was to throw a cream pie at David Icke, during his book signing he couldn't condone that. To which one side-kick agreed, oh no, we couldn't condone that, not someone throwing cream pies, oh no. (Insert more maniacal cackling from Warman and his fawning mate.)

The next day lizard - hooded cowards slithered into the book signing, barged their way up some stairs and threw a pie before bounding down the stairs and out behind the skirts of the night. It was a lousy aim but a small piece of the pie ricocheted off something else and on to David. David wiped it up with his finger and put it to his lips, 'More sugar!' he retorted. Of course this was assault, but David was not the only victim that day. People in the shop were pushed and shoved by the marauding tossers, children's books and shop furniture were spattered with the sour goo. And somewhere, from out in the shadows, a familiar maniacal cackle pierced the night air. But don't worry Richard. David loves you. He says so in his book. SPLAT!!!
Taken from www.ellistaylor.com