Do You Have What It Takes To Wear This Patch?

"Do you have what it takes to wear this patch?" (in other words, are you stupid/poor enough to become a mercenary? - this is from someone who has done it...)

"The flag is worn on the right shoulder to give the effect of the flag flying in the breeze as the wearer moves forward." (riiiiiight.) this is a blatant lie. why isn't it on the other shoulder in its original view without a gold border? For that matter, why isn't it in a camouflaged version (desert) or (woodland) green background/black stars & stripes as i saw in the eighties? Is it a 'target', a 'chip on the shoulder', so to speak?

This is the corporate flag of the 'admiralty/martial?' law administered (hence the gold border), bankrupt (hence the backwardsness='distress signal') flag of the 'united states' corporation identified in David Icke's book Tales From The Time Loop (pgs. 61-4)
